INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGIES

Revolution Running uses a wide range of fibre technologies throughout its running range to offer suitable layering systems for different types of climate conditions.

The short sleeve shirts are made from a technically advanced moisture wicking fabric that is specifically and uniquely engineered. The fabric is sympathetic to the demands of runners, rapidly transporting moisture for improved evaporation and as a result keeping you cooler and comfortable.

The long sleeve shirts made using a Polyester and Viscose mix offer a little more weight and protection for slightly cooler climates, an excellent wicking and durable fabric that will maintain comfort and freedom of movement.

The jacket is a superior outer shell offering protection from shower and wind. The polyester and lycra mix provides comfort and freedom of movement. Its durability makes it an excellent layer for running.

The gilet is made from Stomatex® which uses a pattern of dome-shaped vapour chambers, each with a tiny pore in the centre. While resting, excess body heat and perspiration rise into the dome-shaped chambers and exit through the tiny pores at a controlled rate.

ABOUT US

Revolution Running is a British sportswear brand specialising in advanced technical running apparel and predominantly cotton based leisure wear products.

The company was formed in the Lake District two years ago and manufactures all of its products in the UK.

As well as working with British designers the company is keen to use innovative materials to keep pushing design boundaries and original concepts.

Stomatex® is good example of a material identified and applied to the running range. A British engineered award winning fabric that has been utilised by the company after years of experience in harsh climates to be incorporated in a sympathetic range of layers.
